

Landscape Design Intern Wanted!

- Environmental Justice
- Youth Development
- Lead-Safe Landscaping

Janice Serrano, Toxic Soil Buster and past intern Jon Martin

The Worcester Roots Project, a grassroots non-profit based in Main South, is looking for Spring and Summer interns to work with youth members of the Toxic Soil Busters program - a group of youth, ages 15-18, making neighborhoods healthier and safer by making lead-safe yards.

Calling individuals with experience in landscape architecture / design who would like to share their knowledge with a community group working for environmental justice.

Youth members have basic training in SketchUp and architectural design.

Positions available for volunteer interns and students looking for academic credit. The project is based in Worcester, MA, however in some cases, interns can do a large portion of the work from their locations via phone and electronic document transfer. Internships available Spring and Summer 2008.
